Trucks

The decision to move from a van into a truck package usually depends on the amount of space you are looking to have, the size of your team, the options you are interested in having, and the amount of time you will be spending on the scene. Fuel efficiency, payload, and maneuverability in your environment are definite considerations.

Truck platforms can offer greater versatility in terms of exterior options including rooftop observation decks, heavy-duty lighting packages, awnings, storage, and more. The advantages also stretch to the interior where you can get larger workspaces, options for larger lab type equipment, and the ability to use the vehicle for multiple purposes.
